To my Father

One of the pioneers among his countrymen who have settled and made homes in the Philippines.
"NAME, fame, honor and wealth have never had any attraction for this great Chinese and even his enemies admit that he is one of the most selfless and reasonable men in China.

He is not merely an idealist as some people think. He is most practical in removing the obstacles in the way of democracy, as he has so often proved in his career as a leader.

He is a patriot in the truest sense of the term and like Mazzini is ever ready to help the fallen ones and to sympathize with the oppressed. Dr. Sun hates secret diplomacy and is always frank in expressing his opinions freely and fearlessly. His charming manners, childlike simplicity and profound scholarship make him an unique figure in China. Dr. Sun prefers to work among the people as one of them. He therefore accepts an office only when duty dictates him to do so, giving it up to continue his democratic work among the people as soon as he can be spared."

Dr. Sun Yat Sen's Will

For forty years I have devoted myself to the cause of the people's revolution with but one end in view, the elevation of China to a position of freedom and equality among the nations. My experiences during these forty years have firmly convinced me that to attain this goal we must bring about a thorough awakening of our own people and ally ourselves in a common struggle with those peoples of the world who treat us on the basis of equality.

The work of the Revolution is not yet done. Let all our comrades follow my "Plans for National Reconstruction", "Fundamentals of National Reconstruction", "Three Principles of the People", and the "Manifesto" issued by the First National Convention of our Party, and strive on earnestly for their consummation. Above all, our recent declarations in favor of the convocation of a National Convention and the abolition of unequal treaties should be carried into effect with the least possible delay. This is my heart-felt charge to you.

STaunch Admirer Of The Chinese People

Hon. Manuel L. Quezon
President, Philippine Senate
Message of Senate President Quezon On The 18th Anniversary of the Chinese Republic

On this, the eighteenth anniversary of the Republic of China, I am deeply pleased to extend to my Chinese friends and to the Chinese people in general my whole-hearted congratulations. It is almost a decade now that the Chinese Republic had been established, and during this short span of time great things had been done under the able guidance of China's leaders. If the future is to be judged by the past, I am sure that greater things will yet be done. For such is the history of nations and peoples the world over. Either they progress or they go back. In the case of China, it has been a case of continuous progress, progress towards the goal of untrammelled freedom.

At this instant, let me state that the future of China is bright and rosy, free as I see it from the clouds of outside interference. Of course, much will have to be done before the goal is completely reached. The road to a glorious destiny is not strewn with roses, to be sure. It is beset here and there with the thorns and tumbles of disappointment, and at times, desperation. But happen what may, I believe that China will make her goal good, either soon or late.
PHILIPPINE-CHINESE RELATIONS

By
Prof. Austin W. Craig

"History's first presentation of the Philippine Islands shows them to be a trade adjunct of the Chinese Empire."

So wrote the exiled Filipino lawyer, Don Antonio M. Regidor of London, in seeking to have his countrymen understood by the United States thirty years ago. So, too, had written the earliest Spanish historians in introducing the Islands in Spain three and a half centuries ago. From time to time some publicity seekers get into print about this or that other land as of greater influence on the Philippines but these ephemeral effusions are discredited as soon as their alleged authorities are investigated.

A lecturer on China in a British university a dozen years ago placed the Philippines outside the line of lands known to China before 1400, yet since then thirty undisputable dated references have been unearthed in Chinese records from A. D. 222 down to that year. Ten years later Manila had a Chinese governor whose name is stated and within that first quarter of the same century rulers from Sulu and from Pangasinan visited the Chinese court. The former died and was buried in China, the grave near a mosque and still remembered.

The earliest myths of these Islands mention Chinese; the oldest relics are jars from China. The ancient traditions include by name the Chinaman who in the 13th century showed the Bisayan how to distill an intoxicating beverage from the sugar cane. Almost as early is the Chinese grave in Sulu still yearly decorated by the Chinese commercial colony, of the first merchant who established himself in that once commercial center.

Some eighty Chinese families, exiles, had their homes in Manila when Legaspi first reached that city. The first printer and type-founder in the Philippines was a Chinaman. The most popular image, that of the Virgin of the Rosary, was carved by a Chinese artist, and the first Church paintings were their copies of the several originals brought from Spain.

Chinese love of learning implanted in the Philippines caused the early establishment of the venerable University of Santo Tomas and had a large share in the Filipinos' zeal for schools. Chinese cookery made Filipino hospitality acceptable and numerous historical references could be cited in support of this statement. The Chinese mestiza has ever been the Philippines’ standard of beauty, admired alike by Europeans, Malays, Americans, and her father’s countrymen. Chinese have fought for the Philippines, but better say, have worked for it. There is a large and creditable part in its past—they are the stabilizing influence in its present, and without them there would be no hope for the future. Unlike the objectionable (because of his temporary or transient character) Chinese immigrants to America, here Chinamen have made their homes and established families. In the ancestry of every Filipino of any importance, whether called pure Tagalog like Rizal or Creole like many European mestizos, Chinese ancestors will be found when proper search is made. The new race being built up here in the Philippines is Malay (that is, Dravidian, Indian and Southern Chinese), Caucasian (Indonesian or European or American), Negrito (not African but stunted dark Malay), and Chinese, and the last is not the least important element. It has added sturdiness to the build, increased the intelligence and enhanced the good looks of the Filipinos.

Married to Leonida Manuel of Pampanga in 1929.
INCLUDED in this volume, are the pictures and biographies of over one hundred Chinese residents in the Philippine Islands. The author has endeavored to include herein representative types of Chinese businessmen of the old as well as the young generation, who have been, and are, contributing very much to the economic and industrial development of this country.

The close relations between the Chinese and Filipinos date back to the earliest period of recorded Philippine history. Before Magellan had conceived of his daring venture to encircle the globe—which enterprise led to the discovery of the Philippines—Chinese and Filipinos already had commercial and trade relations. By reason of their geographical locations and racial affinities, China and the Philippines had and will always have intimate relations with each other. Chinese and Filipino leaders, among them Minister C. T. Wang and Senate President Manuel L. Quezon, have realized the value of close friendship between the two peoples and have exerted efforts in the past to bring about such an understanding.

It is with the desire to contribute what little he can to the promotion of Sino-Filipino relations that the author is publishing this Chinese edition of his "Who's Who in the Philippines." Although the relations of the two peoples in the past have been most cordial, except for slight frictions now and then, there is a great need for Filipinos knowing the Chinese more and the Chinese understanding the Filipinos better.

The author has traveled hundreds of miles to obtain the materials for this little book. He has had a heart-to-heart talk with different types of Chinese in Manila and the provinces in connection with this work. And always, each one of them has expressed a keen desire for closer relationships with Filipinos; always, each has wished the time will come when the present prejudices which sometimes engulf the two peoples will forever disappear. A universal sentiment exists in the minds of the Celestials residing in these Islands, and that is, they consider the Philippines their second home, their adopted country, where a great many of them have found their final resting places.

In picking out one hundred from among the thousands of Chinese residents in the Philippines, the author was partly guided by the lists kindly furnished him by the general secretary of the Manila Chinese Chamber of Commerce and the honorary Chinese Consuls of Cebu and Iloilo. A great many of the Chinese whose pictures and biographies appear in this book have spent more years in these Islands than in their native country. An overwhelming majority of them have climbed to the top of their careers from the very bottom, their life stories thus serving as an inspiration to the youth, Filipino and Chinese. These two things, rather than social popularity or financial standing, were the main considerations in choosing them to be included herein.

I wish to acknowledge the cooperation given to me by everyone whose biography is included in this book, with special thanks to Consul General Kwong, Messers. Dee C. Chuan, C. C. Lim, Dee Hong Lue, Go Chioco, Dy Buncio, Albino Sy Cip, and Eduardo del Rosario Tan Kiang of Manila; to Consul Manuel Go Tianuy of Cebu and Consul Yap Seng of Iloilo, without whose encouragement and support in this strenuous and difficult enterprise, my work would not have been a success.

H. K. Kwong
Chinese Consul-General

Mr. Kwong is a native of Canton where he was born in 1892. He attended St. John's University at Shanghai in 1907 and in 1909 was awarded a scholarship by the Tsing Hua College to study in the United States, being second in the competitive examinations held that year.

Mr. Kwong first entered Andover Academy where he studied for one year. He was graduated from Princeton University with the degree of Litt. B. in 1914. He then entered the Graduate School of Columbia University, N. Y., specializing in economics and journalism. He received the degree in journalism in 1916. While at Princeton, Mr. Kwong served on the editorial staff of the Daily Princetonian.
and during his junior and senior years was a contributor to the Springfield Republican, and later was editor of the Chinese Students’ Monthly published in the United States. He was also active in student affairs being a member of the “Key and Seal” Society and the Students Municipal Club. In 1915 he was appointed by the Chinese Government as a delegate to the World Press Congress which met at the Panama Pacific Exposition in San Francisco. In 1916 he was elected president of the Chinese Students Alliance in the United States.

Upon his return to China, Mr. Kwong became assistant editor of the Peking Gazette and also served as Peking correspondent for the New York Evening Post. The next year, 1917, he was appointed lecturer in English and International Law at Tsing Hua College, the school started for the purpose of training Chinese students for admission to American Universities under the Boxer Indemnity remitted to China when Theodore Roosevelt was president.

In 1918, Mr. Kwong came to Shanghai and was appointed secretary of the Government Kiangnan Dock and Engineering Works which was at that time engaged in the construction of several cargo boats on behalf of the United States Shipping Board. In 1922 he joined the Ministry of Communications of the Peking Government and served on the Sino-Japanese Commission which handled the details of the redemption of the former German interests in Shangtung to China following the Washington Conference. In 1919 Mr. Kwong joined the staff of the Chinese Eastern Railway, a Sino-Russian enterprise operating in Manchuria acting as Chinese delegate on the Interallied Technical Board and later assisted in the settlement of the Sino-Russian problems.

In 1926 Mr. Kwong went to Honan province and served as director of the Lung-Hai Railway. In June, 1928 Mr. Kwong organized the Intelligence and Publicity Department of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Nationalist Government at Nanking serving as the first director, from which position he resigned in order to accept the appointment of Chinese Consul General in the Philippines.
A brilliant example of the pioneering spirit of the industrious celestials is the life of the richest Chinese in the Philippines today—Guillermo A. Cu-Unjieng. Forty-eight years ago, he came to Manila a veritable soldier of fortune. He was then 17 years old, a fine young man with the ambition of an Alexander, but on a different line,—business. He did not come with an imperial message to herald him as a business prodigy. He came with the proverbial pair of sandals with a clear purpose to work his way through, and succeed.

But even with such a fine ambition as Mr. Cu-Unjieng had, he could not have made anything for himself if he did not have the grit to stay on odd jobs that reflected nothing of his brilliant mind and wonderful character. He was confronted by a common barrier that threatened to upset his plans. He did not have the money to build sky-scrappers and operate banks. In fact, he hardly had enough to drive the pangs of hunger away and keep his head safe under the unrelenting heat of the tropical sun.

After trying his luck on every available work, he finally landed a position in a Chinese textile office, as a clerk. After a few weeks, he was made bookkeeper, the position which he held for five years. The position did not pay much, but he was able to save a little money and at the same time obtained a good practical knowledge of business.

On his return from a year’s vacation in China, Mr. Cu Unjieng was made manager of the Hap Hin Dry Goods store, which was also doing some direct importation business. For four years he tried his best to make his store one of the biggest concerns in Manila, and succeeded. He did not only establish a reputation for himself as one of the youngest and most successful office managers, but also saved sufficient money to run a business of his own.

In 1893, Mr. Cu-Unjieng married a native of San Pedro Makati, Rizal, Dominga Ayala, and the following year, 1894, Cu-Unjieng & Co., with Mr. Cu-Unjieng as the principal owner and manager, came into being. This business was capitalized at P10,000.00 and organized to engage in textile business. This same company is now capitalized at P1,000,000.00.

Not satisfied with his success as manager of the largest textile business house in the Islands, Mr. Cu-Unjieng, in 1896, founded Siu-liong & Co., together with the late Mariano Limjap and Edilberto Calixto. This was capitalized at P75,000.00 and was organized to engage in an import and export business as well as in semi-banking operations for the Chinese community.

The struggling Chinese lad of 25 years ago now endeavored to take great interest in the insurance and loan business. In 1906, he founded the first and only Chinese insurance company with a capital of P500,000, the Yek Tong Lin Fire & Marine Insurance Co. Ltd., and the Yek Tong Lin Loan Co., Ltd., also capitalized at P500,000.

The unusual foresight of the Chinese Napoleon of business became more prominent when he took the initiative to establish the Chinese Chamber of Commerce immediately after the American occupation. He was also made its first president.

In 1918, Mr. Cu-Unjieng came to realize that there was an urgent need for a bank owned and operated by the Chinese community. For years, the Chinese merchants had been fast developing themselves into a most potent factor in Philippine business affairs, but their financial transactions had been made, for the most part, with American and British banking houses, or with the semi-Filipino financial concerns. The great Chinese business organizer conceived the idea that a Chinese bank would probably provide Chinese merchants with better facilities than those offered by any other financial institution, specially in the matter of contracts, fees, and other necessary things, as then it would be a case of a Chinese doing business with one of his kind who understands him best and can provide him with just the things he wants.

A meeting of all prominent Chinese business men in Manila was called by Mr. Cu-Unjieng and for nearly a week they sat in careful deliberation at his country home at San Pedro Makati. People thought at first that the Chinese merchants were discussing plans for a country-wide campaign to secure financial aid for the home government among local Chinese residents. But after a few days, the real purpose of the get-together became apparent. With the aid of several other Chinese merchants, among them being Dy Buncio, Dee C. Chuan and Siy Cong Bieng, Mr. Cu-Unjieng finally drafted the plans for the foundation of the China Banking Corporation, which is one of the largest banks in the Philippines today.

Mr. Cu-Unjieng has always taken active part in Chinese politics. He held the position of president of the Chinese community for several years and has always subscribed for every bond floated by the Chinese home government, for which the republic has given him several medals in recognition of his patriotic services. He is now president of the Yek Tong Lin Fire & Marine Insurance Co., and the Yek Tong Lin Loan Co., Ltd.; general manager of Cu-Unjieng & Co., director of the China Banking Corporation; and director of the Shanghai Commercial and Savings Bank, Ltd., Shanghai. At one time, he was also director of the Bank of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. Cu-Unjieng is a Nationalist, the official party name of the great Kuomintang organization in China founded by the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen. He is also a Catholic.

The Chinese millionaire has eleven children, four boys and seven girls. The boys are attending La Salle and the Ateneo while the girls are being educated at the Assumption college. One of his daughters is now a nun in Belgium. Mariano, the eldest son, is now taking charge of the vast financial interests of the aged business magnate, and is a veritable "chip of the old block," as far as business foresight is concerned.

Mr. Cu-Unjieng is a hundred per cent Chinese, having been born in Hokian, Chinkang, on November 20, 1865.

First assisted his father in business, taking the latter’s place after Goteco’s death. Has been ever since head of the several lumber firms belonging to the family.

He has been president and vice-president of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce of which he has been an active member for over 20 years. A man who talks a little but does much. Without the blare of trumpets, he has consistently helped civic and patriotic activities in his native country, most notable of them, his donation some two or more years ago, of three airplanes to the Chinese Aviation School and two to the Chinese Nationalist Government. In local charitable causes, too, his purse has always been open.

Mr. Go Jocco was born in Amoy, in 1866, the son of Go Chong Jong and Ong Si. When 16, he came to the Philippines and with a few thousand pesos as start, established a modest dry-goods store on the Divisoria market. After seven years of hard work, just as the business was getting prosperous, the famous fire in Tondo on Feb.
1899 destroyed everything that he had. Ruined but undaunted, he resigned to his unfortunate fate with a smile on his face. Four four whole months he wandered around the streets of Manila in search of a job. Soon thereafter, luck favored him, and he landed a position as manager of the well-known firm of F. M. Lim Tuico. When he resigned in 1905, his share in the firm’s profits amounted to the huge sum of P400,000.

With that money he put up the beginning of his present dry-goods business on Calle Rosario. His firm continued to grow until it reached the peak of prosperity in 1918 when, together with the amount of P170,000 he borrowed from his father in China, he was able to embark in other commercial ventures. Among these, were the oil and sack factories, the first located in Paco, which have for many years now been his principal business lines. Close to a million pesos have been invested already in these enterprises.

Mr. Go Jocco is a Nationalist in Chinese politics. He married Haw Ni of Amoy in 1903. They have eleven children.

He is a member of the Cosmos and Oriental Clubs, and a Mason, belonging to the Araw Lodge No. 18. He has been director of the China Banking Corporation since 1920; at present holding the same position in the Mercantile Bank, and director for about five times in the past of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce.

Residence: Rosario, Manila.

Mr. Uy Yet has been the president and general manager of the firm for over twenty years now.

He married Paulina Lao of a prominent family in Cebu in 1915. They have one child. Mrs. Uy Yet is very well known in Manila social circles.

Dy Buncio & Co., Inc. is today one of the biggest importing and exporting houses in the Islands, with branches and offices in Cebu, Iloilo, Legaspi, and Tabaco, Albay.

C. C. Lim
Youthful Millionaire and Philanthrophist

Mr. C. C. Lim is a prototype of the modern, progressive Chinese youth who have wrought wonderful changes in the social, economic, and industrial life of their country during the last decade.

C. C. Lim does not have more than 28 years of age today. But despite his youth he has been handling during the last seven years a business worth millions of pesos, and stands pre-eminent in the community of his race in these Islands for his never failing generosity and bigness of heart that have always responded to every deserving cause. There has not been any worthy community enterprise in the past to which this youthful millionaire has not given his warm support.

Mr. Lim was born in Manila, on October 4, 1901. His father, the late F. M. Lim Tuico, one of the wealthiest, if not the wealthiest Chinese in this country in his time, came to Manila long before Admiral Dewey sank the Spanish fleet in Manila bay. When barely a year old, his father brought him to China where he spent the next ten years pursuing his early education. He came back to Manila in 1911.

While another boy of his age would have just spent his time enjoying the comforts and luxuries which his father could provide him, Chu Con was initiated in the hard school of life, evidently to be prepared for the responsibilities he was to assume several years later. That training was invaluable to him, for his father died in 1920, and on him fell the task of managing the vast business interests of the family. He has since acted as president of the Viuda E Hijos de F. M. Lim Tuico, one of the biggest and most reputable Chinese firms in the capital.

One distinctive trait in the character of Mr. Lim is his philanthropy. For many years now he has been supporting pensionados in different countries. What makes his generosity more creditable and noteworthy is the fact that he helps not only his own countrymen but Filipinos as well. In other words, his bigness of heart does not discriminate as to race or color. In 1929, he had one pensionado in Japan, two in Shanghai, one in Paris studying art, and three in the United States, two Chinese and one Filipino, the latter, a former U. P. student. All these young men were appointed on recommendation of his friends, and on their scholarship he does not impose any condition. After they finish their studies they are free to work anywhere without absolutely any obligation to reimburse their benefactor for what he has spent for them. Already, three of his former pensionados to the United States have returned and are having profitable employments.

In memory of his father, himself a philanthropist, he built a gigantic stadium in Amoy, China. Chu Con also donated several thousand pesos on the foundation of the local Chinese Y. M. C. A.

Without doubt, there is no other Chinese who has done more for the promotion of athletics and sports in the Philippines than Mr. Lim. Himself a crack player, he founded a Chinese basketball team which he has taken on already three tours abroad, in all cases winning laurels and honors not only for the Chinese community but for the Philippines as a whole. The first tour of the team was in 1924, when it participated in the Chinese National Meet in Wuchung. The second was to Japan in 1927, when it came back from the invasion without a loss to its credit. The third was to the United States in 1928. All the expenses in these trips were borne by Mr. Lim alone.
Explaining his purpose in promoting the development of sports, Mr. Lim says:

"I realize the tremendous benefits to be derived by those who indulge in wholesome athletics. It will make of our youths real men and women in the full meaning of the word—men and women who could be good winners and better losers. It will teach them coordination and cooperation. It will teach them the good in others.

"I am glad that a healthy portion of our youths in our community is today greatly interested in athletics of all forms. It is a good sign, for, in the end it is bound to result in untold benefits in that we shall have men and women with strong minds in strong bodies; men and women who will be in better position to cope successfully with the obstacles of life.

"In lending my wholehearted support to athletics, I am only helping the great, if not patriotic work, for a virile manhood for our Motherland. I sincerely realize that athletics, in conjunction with academic attainments will in the long run place China among the great countries of the world."

On the occasion of the return of the team from the China-Japan tour, the leading members of the Chinese community in Manila paid Mr. Lim a deserved tribute. The Hon. Lingoh Wang, then Chinese Consul General, called him "the most enthusiastic promoter of athletic sports among the Chinese residents in the Philippine Islands"; while Dr. Tee Han Kee, president of the Chinese Y. M. C. A. said of him: "I shall take this opportunity to further express my appreciation of the fine, unselfish, voluntary service rendered to our association by Mr. C. C. Lim. Although a young man, he has evidenced a loyalty to the best interest of his people, worthy of a man twice his years. We are most fortunate to have a man of this type on our Board of Directors and Chairman of our Physical Department Committee."

Mr. Lim is a member of the Oriental, Cosmos, and Lim's clubs. He is also ex-director of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce, Chinese Educational Association, and Mercantile Bank of China. He is a director and treasurer of the Chinese Y. M. C. A. and president of the Alumni Association of the Anglo-Chinese School.

Residence: 200 Rosario, Manila.
ONE of the most prominent members of the Chinese community in the Philippines. Very popular not only among his countrymen but among Filipinos as well. Pro-filipino, he solicited membership in the first independence congress and was the only Chinese admitted to sit in that solemn body convened to discuss the problems connected with Philippine independence.

Don Eduardo was born in Chingkang forty-three years ago. He studied first in his home town and then in Manila where his father brought him when in his early teens. Rather than have a soft and easy life under the care of his father, young Eduardo worked in a dry-goods store on Calle Rosario as an all-around man—messenger, tendero, etc., staying in that job for three years. Flogging along, conquering numerous difficulties as they came on his way, he was able to become independent in a decade, with a fortune enough to enable him to retire from active work.

Nothing extraordinary accounts for his stupendous success except hard work, honesty, and perseverance. Mr. Tan Kiang believes a man cannot rise up unless he is honest in private, business, or professional dealings. He also believes that unless a man has perseverance, the grit to stick to a determination, he is liable to fall by the wayside.

The positions that Mr. Tan Kiang has been, and is holding in commercial and civic associations, bespeak of his standing in the local Chinese community. He was venerable master of the Batong Buhay Lodge under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of the Philippine Islands for two times in the past, and for the third time holding the same position. He is the founder and first president of the Masonic Oriental Club; president of 32-degree Masons; director of the Plaridel Temple; commander, Malcampo Council (30°); wise master, Burgos Chapter, R. C. (18°); and venerable master, Lakan-dola Lodge of Perfection (14°). An unusual distinction was conferred on him this year by his election as Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of the Philippines, the first time that such post has been given to a Chinese. He is also the president of the "Tan Club", an association of prominent Chinese bearing the family name of Tan; and of the Chinese Merchants' Club, an exclusive association of the most prominent Chinese businessmen.

Mr. Tan Kiang is also a sportsman, with special liking to bowling. He was the manager of the team that won the championship in the Plaridel Temple Club tournament of 1926.

He married Luisa Villarica of Marilao, Bulacan, in 1913 with whom he has six children: four girls and two boys, all of whom were born in the Philippines.

Residence: 615 Teodora Alonso, Manila.
Forty-one years ago a penniless twenty-year-old Chinese boy arrived in Manila. A few days after he landed in the capital city he proceeded to Legaspi, Albay, where one of his countrymen willingly employed him as a cook with a salary of P4 a month. Today, he is one of Manila's prominent Chinese businessmen, a leading importer and exporter. Mr. Sy Yoco's career is one of the most remarkable in the history of Philippine business. Born sixty-one years ago in Chinkiang, China, young Sy Yoco decided to come to the Philippines of which he had heard so much from his older countrymen.
Mr. Sy Yoco did not stay long as a cook. He saved every cent of his salary for four months, and with sixteen pesos to his credit established a small sari-sari store in Oas, Albay. In the meantime then, he accustomed himself to local conditions, and his little store which was of the usual Chinese kind catering to the needs of the community, became very successful. After two years of hard struggle, he had earned enough to enable him to expand his business.

His desire for better opportunities brought him to Tabaco, Albay. He left his business in Oas in the hands of his brother and when he arrived in Tabaco, he had but a few pesos in his pocket. With this little amount he managed to put up a sari-sari store. He plogged along in this business for about eight months only, however, for then a golden opportunity, which had been largely responsible for his stupendous rise in the business world, came to him. Realizing Sy Yoco's ability, the Smith Bell & Co., Ltd. appointed him its abaca agent. All in all, he remained as Smith Bell agent for twenty-five years. Throughout that period he made huge profits for himself as well as for the company. In 1905 he separated from the company and established the Sy Yoco & Co., (incorporated in 1929 as Sy Yoco & Sons, Inc.), which is today one of the leading importing and exporting houses in the Philippines. Besides his interests in the Bicol provinces, Sy Yoco is also the controlling stockholder of Werder & Co., Ltd., importers and exporters.

Mr. Sy Yoco is a member of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce. He married Emeteria Pitaliano of Oas, Albay, with whom he has five children, all born in the Philippines. One of his sons, Arsenio Sy Yoco, is assistant manager of Werder & Co., Ltd.

Mr. Uy Cho-Yee was born in Chuanchowfu, Fookien, China, on May 27, 1891. His father was Uy Siuliung and his mother, Tan O-Lua, both of Chinese nationality. He obtained his education at the Diocesan Boys' School in Hongkong which he attended for seven years.

Mr. Uy Cho-Yee has not gone to a higher institution of learning than that. All his later education was made up through self-study, through reading of books, newspapers, and magazines. He takes pride in the fact that he has risen to his present position without a college diploma or an academic degree after his name. What was deprived of him in the university halls he made up with books.
What he missed in the college rooms he learned in the School of Hard Knocks.

It was in 1910 when Mr. Uy Cho-Yee came to the Philippines. His father was a well-known businessman in the Islands being the founder of Siuliung & Co., (co-partnership) and it was with the firm that the young Uy Cho-Yee worked as an apprentice after his arrival. It was not a responsible position that he occupied in the beginning. The father wanted him to begin at the bottom. He eventually became sufficiently prepared for the task when, a few years later, he stepped into the shoes of his father and managed the business as efficiently as the latter. He subsequently rose to be assistant manager and vice-president and ex-officio manager of the Yek Tong Lin Fire and Marine Insurance Company. Mr. Uy Cho-Yee is not only favored with business ability but with a literary gift as well. He has an excellent command of English, and this is indeed, remarkable when it is remembered that he studied the language only by himself.

Mr. Uy Cho-Yee is an ex-Christian. He is at present an agnostic and a freethinker. To him no particular religion is bad; "every one was originally good, or well-intentioned". In other words, his is the religion of humanity.

He has been the president of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce (1927-1928); Inspector of the China Bank (1920-1921); Director (1921-1928); and Chairman of the Board of Directors and acting president of the China Banking Corporation from February 9 to July 22, 1926. He is the managing partner of the Messers. Peng Kee, Amoy, Shanghai, & Manila; president, Caridad Estates of Cavite, Inc.; and president, Uy Cho-Yee & Co., Inc., Manila.

Mr. Uy Cho-Yee married Yu Cuanty of Amoy on March 9, 1912. They have six children.

He is a member of the Sociedad de Tiro al Blanco de Manila, Oriental Club, Cosmos Club, Laong Laan Tennis Club, Inc., and the Chinese Y. M. C. A.

BORN in Amoy, China, on Feb. 4, 1880, the son of Tee Chit Gin and Go Giok. Obtained early education in his native town, later continuing studies in the Anglo-Chinese College of Foochow where he finished the secondary course. He then entered the Hongkong Medical College and there obtained the L.M.S. degree in 1905. Coming to the Philippines in the same year he took the government medical examination, passed it, and thus allowed to practice his profession in these Islands. Almost immediately after qualifying, he was appointed assistant surgeon in the Philippine Health Service with an initial salary of P150 a month, with the privilege of free practice. For nineteen years he remained in that position, until 1921 when, with the
In 1917 he came to the Philippines again, this time not on vacation, but to engage in business. He became a partner of his brother in the Dee C. Chuan & Co., Inc. In 1928, he established a firm of his own, the Dee Hong Lue & Co., Inc., capitalized at two million pesos, of which one million is fully paid up. Not many years ago he bought the concessions of the Zambales Lumber Company from Teodoro R. Yangco, Filipino millionaire.

Mr. Dee is the vice-president of the Negros Philippine Lumber Corporation; director, Chinese Chamber of Commerce; president, Manila Lumber Merchants' Association; director, Philippine Lumber Manufacturing, Inc.; director, Dee C. Jose G. Barretto

Mr. Barretto was born in Fookien, China, on July 1, 1899, the youngest son of Pio Barretto, one of the most prominent Manil-la Chinese in his time, and Engracia Jacinto, a Filipino woman. Young Jose was brought to the Philippines when barely two years old, and some time later was sent back to China for his elementary education. Returning to Manila after several years stay in his native country he entered the Ateneo de Manila, remaining nine years in that institution, until 1918, when he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

His studies terminated, young Jose was taken in as an employee in his father’s firm, then known as Herederos de Pio Barretto. To the older Barretto, his son's A.B. diploma was not a passport to an easy and soft life. It was the latter's initiation into the practical business world, and from the bottom he had to start. For five years young Barretto dragged along as a common employee, receiving no special favors or considerations, with a small fixed salary. The hard training did a lot of good to the son for, when in 1923 fell upon him the grave responsibility of managing the family's vast interests, he was more than sufficiently prepared. The lumber firm, Viuda é Hijos de Pio Barretto, which this young man has been managing for seven years now, is one of the biggest in the country.

Instead of wasting his non-office hours in a career of pleasure and enjoyment, as the majority of young men of his age and wealth do, Mr. Barretto has devoted them to study. For several years he endured the hard grind of the classroom at the Mapua School of Technology, and as the reward of his efforts, he was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Science in Architecture last June, earning the distinction of being the first local Chinese to be graduated from that study in a Manila college or university. When asked why he took the course when he does not need it, he replied: "To me intellectual attainment is more than possession of wealth. Money is not everything in this world." Now, this exceedingly promising young man has both.

Mr. Barretto married Magdalena Cu Unjieng, daughter of the wealthiest Philippine Chinese, on Feb. 19, 1925. They have three children.

He is a Catholic and a member of the Club Filipino, Wack Wack Golf Club, Oriental and Cosmos Clubs.

Residence: Manila.
ONE of the most successful Chinese businessmen in the Philippines. Through industry, thrift, and ambition, he was able to rise from employee to a boss of himself in the space of scarcely ten years.

Hails from Amoy, where he was born fifty-three years ago. He spent a few years in the elementary schools of his town and thereafter supplemented his education through self-study. Impelled by an adventurous spirit came to the Islands shortly after the beginning of the Filipino-American war. Taking advantage of what he planned to be a temporary stay here, he engaged in a small importing business, exclusively dealing with Chinese goods. He remained in Manila for a year or two at that time, then returned to his native country. Induced by the bright possibilities he had seen in the Philippines, he came back again to Manila. He thereby entered the employ of Don Rafael Matchuca Gotauco as superintendent of construction in Manila and the provinces. After saving enough capital he formed a partnership with a friend to engage also in the construction business. The firm became prosperous and on one occasion, it secured the biggest contract from the quartermaster department of the United States Army at Fort McKinley, calling for the construction of 56 buildings at one time. When Mr. Choy and his partner split in 1912, he established the United Plumbing Company. The Company has branches at present in Cebu and Iloilo.

Mr. Choy has helped very much in the cause of education of the Chinese youth in this country. He is one of the founders of the Anglo-Chinese School Association, now known as the Philippine Chinese Educational Association. Previous to the establishment of the association, the standard of the Chinese schools in Manila was not high. What Mr. Choy did was to work out carefully with the other directors the improvement of instruction by importing the best educators available from the home country. He was for some time misunderstood and made the object of attacks from certain quarters of the Chinese community, but after the beneficial results were seen, he was more than anybody else the recipient of compliments.

Mr. Choy is a Protestant. He married Go Si of Amoy in 1900. Out of the union were born three children.

He has been the managing director of the Mercantile Bank since its foundation. He is a member of the Oriental and Cosmos Clubs and ex-director of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce.

HAILS from Chingkang, Fukien, where he was born 42 years ago, the son of Chan Know and Go Yu, both of Chinese nationality. Studied for several years in his native town and came to the Philippines when a little over ten years of age. When barely 14, he was made cashier of a reputable Chinese firm in the province, capitalized at a hundred thousand pesos, that of Lucino Almeida Chantanco. Two years later he was promoted manager. Among the places in the provinces where he had stayed long is San Fernando, La Union. It was there also where he studied under Professor U. S. Dreyden.

Feeling that chances in the provinces were limited he came to Manila in 1912 where he became general manager of Enrique Lete.
Chan Chuan, leaf tobacco, sugar, and maguey merchant, with about one million pesos capital. He did his best to win the satisfaction of his employer, and throughout the nine years that he stayed in that position, he saved as much as he could with the idea of establishing in the future a business of his own. His ambition was realized in 1921 when, with two other Chinese, he organized the Philippine Aromatic Cigarettes Manufacturing Company. For the growth and prosperity which the factory has had during the last seven years, Mr. Chan Quep was responsible. He acted as its general manager until February 1, 1930 when he quit the company to put up the Sweet Dreams Aromatic Cigarettes Factory at present located in San Francisco del Monte, Municipality of San Juan, Rizal. To Mr. Chan Quep belongs the distinction of being the first local cigarette manufacturer who succeeded in giving native cigarettes an aromatic flavor as those imported from Virginia, U. S. A.

Mr. Chan Quep is a Nationalist in Chinese politics. He is married with seven children, six born in the Philippines.

He is an ex-director of the "Chinese Community", and ex-president and founder of the Eni Chingkang Samseng School Society in China. He is a Mason, belonging to the Nilad Lodge No. 12.

THEN a lad of eleven, Dee Cho came to the Philippines about twenty years ago from his town, Chuanchu, Amoy, where he was born on Feb. 12, 1898. Shortly after his arrival he entered the employ of Dee C. Chuan, Chinese "lumber king," who was then also struggling for a place at the top of the business world. For three years he worked with no other compensation than free board and lodging. While working during the day at that time he studied in a local night school to improve himself. After several years of service he was given a salary of P20 a month. He was subsequently promoted from one position to another until in 1919, after having saved enough, he quit his job and formed a partnership with ano-

Born in Binondo, Manila, the son of Francisco Cabo Chan Pongco, wealthy Chinese businessman, and Teresa Cabuntas, a Filipino woman. At the age of seven he was brought to China to be educated in the Thombon College, Amoy, staying in that institution until his sixteenth year. At the latter age, he joined the revolutionary forces then fighting against the Manchu dynasty, reaching the rank of lieutenant. Once during his two years service, he was imprisoned by the Manchus and released only through the good offices of some foreign consuls.

Returning to Manila with his mother, he was employed as bookkeeper of the firm Chan Bondo & Co., in which post he stayed for three years. Leaving that position, he went to Cabanatuan, Nueva Ecija, and engaged in the rice and general merchandise business, his firm then known as Justo Cabo Chan & Co. Since about two years ago, he has transferred to Manila, although he still has interests in Cabanatuan.

Mr. Cabo Chan was for many years honorary Chinese consul in Nueva Ecija. His resignation from that post was accepted by the Chinese Nationalist government in 1929, only after it was presented for the third time. He has been recently appointed advisor on foreign affairs by the Chinese government.

A testimonial to the diplomatic ability of Mr. Cabo Chan was his success in averting what would have been an unfortunate serious clash between Filipinos and Chinese in the province of Nueva Ecija in 1924. The trouble was precipitated by the differences between some Chinese and Filipinos in Manila, and it was only through the timely intervention of Mr. Cabo Chan that an actual clash was avoided. For this service he was highly commended by prominent elements of both peoples.

He was president of the Nueva Ecija Chinese Chamber of Commerce, 1919 to 1923, and of the Nueva-Ecijano Club, 1919 to 1920.

He married Paula Paulina of San Miguel de Mayumo, Bulacan. They have eight children, all of whom were born in the Philippines.

Finding himself penniless after a disastrous fire shortly after the start of the Filipino-American war, he established another business with his brothers, the beginning of the present firm of Vicente Gotamco Hnos., one of the leading Manila lumber houses today. Mr. Gotamco donated a few years ago more than 2,000 square meters of land for market site to the Municipality of Pasay, Rizal.

Here he began his early education, enrolling then in the Chinese Primary School on Calle Asuncion. From that school he transferred to the Tondo Intermediate School where he stayed for six years.

Later he went to Hongkong and continued his studies in English at the St. Joseph’s college. He stayed in that institution for a few months only, however, for he went home to China and got married. In 1908 he returned to Manila and he was employed in the store of Buenaventura Chun Tianlay on Calle Rosario. Here he remained for two years. Two years later, or in 1910, Ang Ban To joined his father as the latter's associate. The next seven years he was the right hand man of his father, until 1917, when the latter died and Ang Ban To became the manager of the business.

At present, the firm is one of the leading Chinese importing and exporting houses in Manila, dealing principally in the importation of matches and canned goods, and manufacturers of "Araw" soy (toyo). Coming to the Philippines in 1891, he was first employed as a clerk in the firm of Pablo Ortega where he stayed for eight years. When he had saved a few thousand pesos, he quit his job and founded the "Viva la Suerte" in 1899, one of the earliest and most popular cigarette and tobacco factories in the city. Three years afterwards, Emilio Gonzales LaO associated with him as partner. After another three years, the latter sold his interests to his associate. He then went to the tobacco business. He still later switched to the dry good business, establishing a firm dealing along that line on Calle Nueva for 14 years. In 1921, he was called again to manage the “Viva La Suerte”, staying there until 1926. In 1927, he assumed his present position.

The manner in which he has been running the “La Paz y Buen Viaje” factory is shown by the prosperous business it has been having during the last two years. With his ability and industry he has made it into a first-class establishment. Two of his sons have gone to college, one having graduated from the Jose Rizal College, and the other, a student in chemistry at the University of the Philippines. Cebu
Manuel Go Tianuy
Honorary Consul in Cebu

Admittedly the richest and most popular Chinese in the province of Cebu, liked and admired by Filipino, American, and foreign elements, Mr. Manuel Go Tianuy is equally acknowledged to be the most influential member of the Chinese community in the South.

He was born in Chuanchio, Amoy, in May, 1888, the son of Go Tiaoco, one of the richest and most prominent Cebu Chinese in his time. After studying in the elementary school of his native town, Mr. Tianuy was brought to the Philippines by his father in 1902. He enrolled in the Anglo-Chinese School in Manila and later went to Hongkong to enter the St. Joseph's college. In that institution when many of the leading Chinese in the Philippines have been educated, Mr. Tianuy pursued a commercial course for three years. Mr. Tianuy was not immediately entrusted with the management of his father's business once back in Cebu. He was assigned to different departments of the firm to gain experience and was treated no differently from the rest of its employees. It took three years of strenuous work before his father considered him amply prepared for the task of assuming the direction of the company's vast interests. The elder Go retired from active business in 1915, and his shoes were stepped by the son.

The rapid expansion of the business since he assumed management is a testimonial to Mr. Tianuy's executive ability. The firm is today at the forefront in its lines, among them in the importing, exporting, and shipping business. Besides being the president and general manager of the Gotiaoco Hermanos, Inc., Mr. Tianuy is the president of the Hoa Hin, Inc., another million-peso Cebu shipping firm. The firm has just completed the construction of a huge drydock which rivals in size those in Manila.

Mr. Tianuy's popularity and high standing in the cosmopolitan elements in Cebu have been demonstrated by his election as vice-president of the Cebu Chamber of Commerce. Being a big-hearted man, he never is behind in extending his help in social and civic movements.

Besides his business affiliations already mentioned above, Mr. Tianuy is a stockholder in many other firms, president of the Far Eastern Club, and a director of the Cebu Y. M. C. A.

He married Alicia Wong of Chuanchio, Amoy, in 1911. Out of the union were born seven children, two of whom are students in exclusive colleges in Manila.

Residence: Cebu, Cebu.
HE "grand old man" of the Chinese community in Cebu, respected not only by his countrymen in the province but by Filipinos and foreigners as well. Mr. Yap Anton is one of the early pioneers in the Philippines from the neighboring Republic, having arrived in the Islands in 1882 when he was only 15 years old. His father, Yap Cham, was a businessman of long residence here during the Spanish times, and it was under him that the son obtained his elementary training in business.

Following the usual custom and practice among Chinese, Mr. Yap Anton had to begin as a simple "tendero" in his father's store.
The training lasted over ten years, and when the father died in 1894, the son succeeded him.

As in the case of other successful men, Mr. Yap Anton met one of the most unfortunate reverses shortly after he took charge of his father's business. The little fortune which the elder Yap built up through innumerable sacrifices for score or more years was wiped out by a fire which took place on the arrival of the Americans in Cebu. What was then a flourishing store was reduced to ashes, and it seemed as if the son who had hoped to see it become bigger and bigger, was destined to absolute ruin. No greater discouragement could indeed have come to a man. But as Providence willed it, there were three things that favored Mr. Yap Anton and which enabled him to build once more out of the debris left by the flames, a fortune that is now his pride as the reward of his untiring efforts.

When the ruins of the fire were removed it was found that a safe containing several thousand pesos had been spared. This money he invested in sugar and favored by high prices then prevailing in Hongkong he was able to make big profits. Then he also had a branch store in Iloilo, and taking the stock to Cebu, he was helped a great deal in his first step at rehabilitation. But above all these, Mr. Yap Anton had a greater asset, and that was his good credit not only in Manila but also in Hongkong.

Building on these little by little, through untold sacrifices and efforts against difficulties, he succeeded in regaining his previous losses, and was able to put his present business which ranks in standing with any other firm of its kind in Cebu. Besides the Yap Anton Bros., the firm also operates the Yap Anton & Co., and the Yap Amping Grocery, both in the city of Cebu.

Mr. Yap Anton has always taken active part in civic movements, notable of which was his help in the construction of the Chuang Hua Hospital and the establishment of the Cebu Chinese School of which he is one of the founders. Of the former he has been treasurer and member of the board of directors and of the latter, vice-president and treasurer. He is also an active member of the Cebu Chinese Chamber of Commerce and of the Far Eastern Club.

Mr. Yap is married and has five children, three of whom were born in the Philippines. He comes from Open, Amoy, China.

Go Occo

Born in Chuanchio, Sept. 1876. Educated in China. Arrived in Cebu, 1891. While studying at night, he worked as a "tendero" in a Chinese store for five years with a salary of P10 a month. With P500 as capital he established a sari-sari store, but everytime he was on the verge of prosperity, a fire destroyed everything that he had. This happened four times, the last in 1910. Through good credit, industry, and perseverance, however, he has always been able to stand up, and now, his firm is one of the biggest in Cebu.

Married in 1899. He has 12 children, ten born in the P. I. Director, Cebu Chinese Chamber of Commerce, Cebu Chinese School, Association Benévola de Chinos, and member, Far Eastern Club.

An inspiration for every young man struggling for success is the life of Mr. Go Chan, one of the most prominent and successful Chinese businessmen in Cebu. Thirty-five years ago he arrived in Manila from Chingkang, China, where he was born in 1881. His first job was in a slipper factory at a salary of P4 a month. Doing varied errands during the day, young Go then studied at night. For four long years, he dragged along with the four-peso salary. Then his first promotion came. He was given P6 and again two years later raised to P15. Six months afterwards, the amount was increased to P20 or P240 a year.

He was satisfied, but the adventuring spirit in Mr. Go Chan took him to Cebu. There he was first employed in the firm of Ong Liong Hay, a Chinese house, with a compensation of P400 per annum, and a participation of ten per cent in the profits. He stuck to that job for four years, after which he went back to China to spend an eight-month vacation.

Returning to Cebu in 1904, he entered the employ of Go Occo & Co. as manager. After sixteen years of successful management of the firm, he left his job on March 1, 1921, and taking out all his savings, formed the Cochin & Company with capital of P60,000. The growth of his business since then may be seen from the fact that in 1930, the firm increased its capital to $300,000, with eighty per cent of the company’s stock.

Mr. Go Chan married Tan May of Amoy, in... they have eight children, four of whom were born in the Philippine Islands. His oldest son is finishing his commercial course at a well-known university in Shanghai.

Mr. Lim Bonfing was born in Chuanchio, Amoy, fifty-three years ago, the son of Lim Mah Teng. He landed in these Islands at the age of 18 without much money but with plenty of ambition. Like the beginning of many other successful Chinese in this country he has to begin at the very bottom. To a low job he stuck once the opportunity presented itself, and after staying in it for five years, he was able to accumulate enough money to start a business of his own. It was a very low start that Mr. Lim Bonfing had, a humble tendero's job at a salary of P5 a month. But the pay and the kind of job didn't concern him much. All that he wanted was to have a start. So throughout the five years that he kept on to that work, he saved and learned all that he could, and then embarked on what subsequently became a very successful career.

It was not Mr. Lim Bonfing alone in the family who was endowed with such and adventurous and fighting spirit. He had three brothers, Esteban Lim Jiaco, Lim Bonsing, and Lim Bonjuy, who were determined to make good. Thus pulling together, they started a modest business with a capital of about $6,000.

In a lapse of more than a decade, the Westwind trading firm grew to a business organization which at present can be considered as leading in the province of Cebu.

Bonfing Hermanos, Inc., is engaged in general merchandise, importing, exporting, buying and selling native products. It has several stores in the city and provinces and operates a kapok factor.

Mr. Lim Bonfing still takes active part in the business, aided by his nephew, Y. S. Lim, who acts as the manager of the firm.

Mr. Lim Bonfing married Go Suat Sun of Amoy twenty-three years ago. Twelve children have been born, six of whom were born in the Philippines.

He is a member of the Far Eastern Club, the Cebu Chinese Chamber of Commerce, and other social and civic organizations.

About four years later he transferred to Yap Sioco at P400 a year. He stayed in the latter job for two years only because the Yaptico firm once more solicited his services. He was now given a higher compensation, and so well did he show in his work that he was rapidly promoted, remaining with the com-
